CENTRA

Induction for College Governors

■ This seminar will be of interest to

- Newly appointed governors
- People intending or interested in becoming a governor

■ About this seminar

The role of a governor is becoming more demanding. Governors are leading multi-million pound businesses in a highly competitive environment. The self-assessment, audit and inspection systems are making them more publicly accountable. Any yet, most governors take on the role because they are interested in promoting students' achievement and welfare. This seminar will show governors how they can do both effectively.

■ The benefits of attending

- To understand clearly the role of a governor
- To understand a governor's rights and responsibilities
- To understand how corporations work and how decisions are made
- To understand the legal framework of governance
- To appreciate the Instrument and Articles, Standing Orders and other key documents
- To understand how the individual governor can play a full part
- To understand how demands on colleges are changing

■ Presenter

John Perry

John was a chair of governors for 6 years. He has been an OfSTED Registered Inspector and has undertaken the ISCA Certificate in FE Governance. He successfully undertook accredited governor training and is clerk to the governors at two colleges.
